

Patrick Goergen  May 5, 2022 1 min read

New Technologies Develop Faster than the Regulations Governing Them

The invention of new technologies, their introduction into the market and the growing importance of increasingly strategic resources is going faster than policymakers can provide timely and precise regulations. Military technologies and nuclear weapons are also a means of controlling international relations and an important asset in managing relations with other countries.

This article analyses the issue in detail and provides interesting ideas for reflection.

Read here.